

What items did you enjoy the most this year?

Fruit was the most enjoyed item of the year. Many members included potatoes, spinach, and lettuce in their comments. Again, members indicated a preference for "normal" crops such as broccoli, potatoes, head lettuce, green beans, and watermelon. Although again, the majority of our members feel the amounts they received of these items was sufficient.

What items did you not prefer?

Greens are again the perennial front-runner in this category. This year there was an even split between members stating they received "more than I can use" and "the perfect amount". For 2011, we will continue with the current level of greens production and work to achieve a better balance of items each week so members don't feel as if they are getting too many greens. Several members responded that they did not prefer the baked goods.

How may we improve your experience next year?

Many of the suggestions are similar to last year: make the newsletter easier to access online or via email, possibly send it out the day before delivery; a couple of responses indicated delivery costs were too high; make available a bin for swapping out unwanted items; offer more fruit. One member suggested we make available more local products that they could get with their share.

Please share any other thoughts about The Homestead's CSA program.

Similar to 2009 responses, most comments in this field were more praise for the work we do and calls for us to keep doing it. One member wanted more notice of what is coming each week, another wants greater variety within the crop types we grow. One member commented that the program is too expensive.

If you are not returning, please tell us why.

The two main responses were that the program did not meet their expectations in some way or that the member was moving out of state. Unmet expectations included the amount or type of produce not being useful based on member needs or tastes and the distance traveled to pick up their share. A couple of responses indicated a greater reliance on personal gardens for fresh veggies.

Please tell us about friends or relatives who may be interested in joining us for 2009.

No referrals in 2010